FIRST AID TO THE INJURED

By DR. H. H. HARTUNG.
(Copyright by H. H. Hartung)

HOW TO APPLY A BANDAGE.

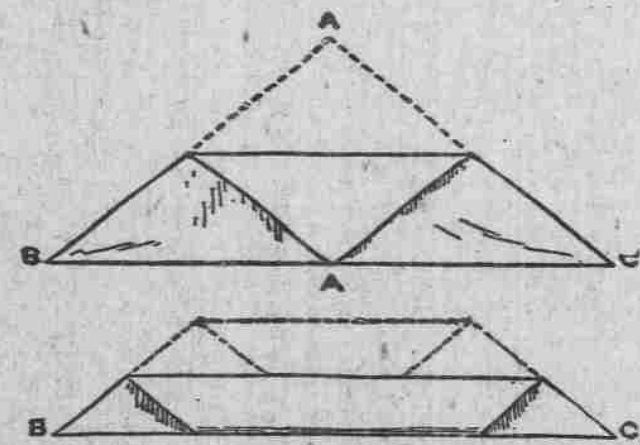

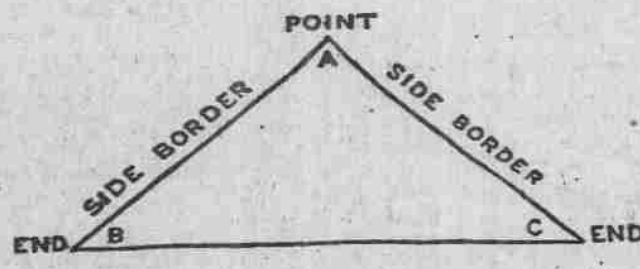

A knowledge of bandaging is essential and should be possessed by everybody. One never knows when this valuable accomplishment may be required and a knowledge of proper bandages and tourniquets might save life. The next three lessons will deal with this subject.

Bandages—Bandages are pieces of cloth of various widths, lengths and shapes, and are used to bind on and restrain dressings in their proper positions for wounds, and splints for broken bones, to stop bleeding, give support and immobilize different parts of the body. Different materials are used for bandages, such as linen, muslin, gauze, flannel and cotton. Bandages are principally of two shapes, the triangular or Esmarch bandage and the roller bandage.

The triangular or Esmarch Bandage, which was first introduced into popular use by Surgeon-General Esmarch of the German army in 1889, is the ideal bandage for first aid work and is more easily applied by those unskilled in the use of the roller bandage. The triangular bandage is easily made by cutting a piece of cloth forty inches square into two triangular halves, and may be made from muslin, flannel, gauze, or linen, but should preferably be made from a piece of strong cotton cloth. The triangular Esmarch bandage is made of cotton, upon which illustrations of various emergencies are printed, clearly showing just what to do and how to apply the bandage in all cases of first aid requiring the use of the bandage. In order to become familiar with the use of the triangular bandage, it is well to give a general description of the same. The longest edge of the bandage is called the lower border, and the two sides of the triangle are known as the side borders; the apex of the triangle, the point. The other two corners of the triangle are called the two ends. The bandage may be applied as a whole or may be folded into different widths in the form of cravats, depending upon the part of the body to be bandaged. These cravats are very useful to stop bleeding and to retain various splints and dressings and are also useful as slings.

"THE HAPPY WIDOWS"

AT THE PARK THEATRE

"The Happy Widows" came out of the west according to the Park management. They showed for the first time in Bridgeport last night, with Joseph K. Watson and Will H. Cohen, two few comedians of the first water in the leading role. From the very beginning one knew that it was an offering of unusual excellence and the laugh was continuous. There is a happy intermingling throughout of real song, exceptional voices and an olio of specialties, which are novel and in keeping with the whole production. "The Happy Widows" is like a cloudburst of joy which pours upon the audience a steady downpour of new jokes, dialogue and unique, laugh-inspiring quips. A few more of the western wheel shows will be greatly appreciated from the standard set by this one.

Watson and Cohen who are the backbone of the comedy are seen throughout. Their humor is infectious and their character well stimulated and natural. They arrive in Mexico after a long voyage and in their belief they will soon die. Florio, an heir, in love with a revolutionist, designs to marry them to gain a fortune left by her father on the condition she marry an American. They are inveigled into becoming revolutionary generals and their constant troubles and dangers are turned into situations most comical.

An olio, a real diversion, is offered in the Salda Winston Opera Duo, whose voices are beyond any criticism and whose selections made an immense hit with the capacity audience present. The Mysterious Valdo, assisted by Irving Hay, presented levitation and the "Clown's Four," singing, dancing and comedy instrumentalists add greatly to the gaiety.

A large program of musical numbers backed up by a live, well appearing and finely costumed chorus is offered. "Peg O' My Heart," sung by Miss Van Buren, the "Honeymoon Express" by Fay Odell, "He Wants Some One to Call Him Papa," "Mammy's Little Jubilee," by Dave Harris and a series of parodies by Cohen and Watson were selections which took several encores.

ENTERTAINING BILL AT
POLI'S NEW THEATRE

There's vim and breeziness about the bill at the New Poli's that makes one regret that it's all over so soon. In fact it is so good that the management found trouble securing seats for those who came in for the second show as many patrons remained through both performances.

Choice of the best act is difficult, as "The 13 Boys in Blue," Broughton and Turner in a skit, "Just Landed," and Ed Morton, the singing comedian, went equally well. The other three acts came in for their share of well merited approval.

The rapidity and agility with which "The 13 Boys in Blue" go through regulation army maneuvers won them great applause. They show lightning speed in army drills, artillery practice, battle formations and wall scaling. A rapid fire Gatling gun adds realistic touches to the scene.

A somewhat different sketch, "Just Landed," is acted by Broughton & Turner. This act is Irish all through and won well merited applause. In bright quips and with a number of the old and several new Irish airs the duo entertained well. Miss Turner as an Irish colleen was in especially fine voice last evening as was also Mr.

Broughton.

Ed Morton, the most popular singing comedian on the American stage, is again welcome. The audience knew Mr. Morton well, for he had to bow to the applause even before he started. This year he has a repertoire of songs that are really new. He started with "Adam and Eve Must Have Had a Wonderful Time" and followed with "Since Mrs. McNott Learned to Turkey Trot," "Oh, How That Woman Cooked," "Everybody's Got to Do It Now," and "Your Mother's Gone to Join the Army."

Frevoli, a comedy shadowgraphist, was well received in a number of comic silhouettes and reflections. This act was a new one on the audience and went big. Helene & Juston are two girls in a refined singing and piano sketch. They entertain with instrumental and vocal selections. Louis M. Grant, "The Human Bird," is a whistler of repute. His imitations were excellent while his whistling renditions of classical airs could not be excelled. An interesting two-reel photo play completed the evening's enjoyment.

LEODATO MYSTIFIES
PATRONS OF THE PLAZA

It was an awe struck crowd that witnessed the performance last night of Leodato the Italian Magician, a necromancer, who is appearing at the Plaza theatre this evening. Leodato mystified all who saw him with his truth-telling, illusions and weird tricks of magic. First he ate the contents of a large silver bowl, a sort of stringy paper and swallowed it, blowing out a volume of smoke at each mouthful. He then allowed his neck and hands to be locked in a contrivance similar to that used on the old prison ships which they termed the "necklace" and from which no victim could escape. Passing through the audience he displayed the lock for inspection and to prove that the lock would not be opened he had a piece of string sealed to it and to the side of the "necklace." In less than a minute he had freed himself and the lock remained intact. Numerous other new and wonderful tricks served to keep the audience almost spellbound through his entire act and he was given a big ovation at the close.

Another act that made a big impression on last night's audience was that presented by Watson and Cohen. Both are clever comedians and classically eccentric dancers. Their closing number in which they appear in kilts was greatly appreciated. Pretty Hazel Crosby and her youthful partner came in for their share of the honors. Miss Crosby displays some handsomeness and costliness and has a charming personality. Her partner is a mere boy and sings to her from the upper box.

Then came Haggerty & Leclair in an excruciatingly funny sketch entitled "Casey the Butcher." Haggerty's Irish wit was responsible for roars of laughter and the close of the act saw him divorced of his clothing even down to his trousers in a rather mysterious manner. Leonard & Mack in a comedy acrobatic act that is different from the ordinary received well earned rounds of applause for their clever work. A vitally interesting and instructive masterpiece of the motion picture art was presented in "The Clouds," a Lubin two reel film. It gives a vivid insight of the horror of war. "Tobias Wins Out" and "Better Days" made up the bill.

PARK THEATRE

A return engagement of George Kleine's marvelous photo-play "Quo Vadis" will begin on Monday next at the Park theatre and continue for three nights with daily matinees. These animated views of the closing days of the reign of Nero have lost nothing of their interest. Some persons have visited there a number of times. One visit is hardly sufficient to form a complete idea of the Roman life and the declining days of the great empire. Students of history will ness the scenes with eager interest, for nowhere else can they find so vivid a portrayal of the glory and wickedness, the splendor and cruelty of Rome. The horrors of the arena are detailed with marvelous fidelity. The burning of the city of Rome is a spectacle that can never be forgotten, and the scene of the lions about to devour the Christians is most thrilling. The chariot races and the gladiatorial contests show with marvelous fidelity the phase of life that has happily passed away, never to return.

The Advanced Dancing Class meets this evening at Quilty's School of Dancing. There will be instruction in the new dances introduced by the International Association, followed by dancing until midnight. The classes for beginners at the school will commence next week. Thursday evening a private class for beginners in the waltz and foxtrot, complete in 12 lessons. Friday afternoon a class for the members of the Bridgeport High School, and Saturday afternoon a class for the children. Terms may be obtained by telephone or by call at the Colonial or from booklets which will be mailed on application.—Adv.

POLI'S THEATRE

Tonight is the great "Tango Contest Night" at Poli's. Under the direction of Prof. Galvin, it promises to be one of the most artistic yet active contests ever given in Bridgeport. The stage. That hundreds in the city of Bridgeport are familiar with the steps and believe themselves the best dancers hereabouts, certain they are the long list of applicants. As many cannot be given the opportunity they seek, it is likely that a second performance will be necessary. Prizes have been stipulated for the place and tonight's exhibition will show only those who have demonstrated to the director that they are capable of dancing not only with skill but with grace which is beyond question. It is likely that as many as fifty local couples will have the stage.

DANBURY BENCH SHOW

This Royal Feature Will Return to the 1913 Fair.

Again this year the directors of the Danbury Fair have installed the Bench Show. This feature was greatly missed when it was omitted from the regular curriculum of this great exposition.

A bench show gives tone to a fair and the Danbury Fair (Oct. 7-11), will be a high toned one in every department. Entries will close Tuesday, Sept. 23. Premium lists will be sent upon application to G. M. Rundle, secretary, Danbury, Conn., or James Mortimer, president of the bench show, Hempstead, N. Y.

Entries in the past have represented the highest society in dogdom. Pedigree, a mile long, and animals whose names are on the rolls of the owner's motor cars are seen on the tannery. The Fair of 1913 will present a list of exhibitors surpassing predecessors. Foxgloves, collared, massive dandies, intelligent mastiffs and hounds and domestic and sport canines will all be there. A vigorous and merited contest will keep the kennels at the Danbury Bench Show. Dog lovers and spectators who delight in the sight of so many fine animals.—Adv.

SEX EDUCATION

To what extent can sex instruction be given in the public schools? Wide difference of opinion still exists among school men on the subject, judging from reports received at the United States Bureau of Education. There is widespread recognition of what President Taft called "the sex problem," and "The Social Emergency," and general agreement as to the need of action against the social evil, but when it comes to the question of what part the school shall play, the ideas range from a detailed plan of sex instruction beginning in the elementary schools to a determined opposition to any form of sex education whatsoever.

Professor Thomas M. Ballet, of New York University, outlines several points of attack in sex education. He believes sex instruction can now be given to the following groups: (1) To parents, by means of lectures; (2) to enlisted men in the Army and Navy, where the need for it is urgent; (3) to college students, both men and women; (4) to young people in Y. M. C. A.'s and similar associations. Dr. Ballet considers sex instruction to college students particularly valuable, because it will enable them to impart sex knowledge in turn to pupils in elementary and secondary schools, as soon as the public is prepared for this step.

Recently medical men have joined hands with school men in the sex hygiene movement. Dr. Hugh Cabot, a distinguished physician of Boston, is one of the leaders in the demand for sex instruction in the schools. He declares that the policy of silence and punishment as practiced in the past has failed. He suggests education rather than punishment, as a remedy for social evils. He says: "Sooner or later we shall come to realize that teaching the comprehension of the sex instinct is the function of the public school, though we are far from such a realization today." Other members of the American Federation of Sex Hygiene, including former President Elliot, of Harvard, who is the head of the organization, hold equally positive views of the need for sex instruction.

On the other hand, there are many, both among educators and physicians, who see danger in sex instruction in the schools. Dr. Tierney, president of Woodstock College, Maryland, expresses the fear that is in the minds of many thinkers, when he says: "Sex instruction is apt to put forward by some years the time of suggestion and temptation. Safety lies in diverting the sex drive from sex itself." Officials of the Bureau of Education believe that the sex hygiene question is about to assume great importance in school systems. Chicago is now struggling with the problem; the board of education has appropriated money to provide lectures on sex hygiene to parents and to groups of high school pupils, with the ultimate idea of extending sex instruction to the elementary schools if the experiment with older pupils proves satisfactory. Teachers in New York City, who are now conducting sex instruction in elementary school, have been considered worthy of distribution by the United States Government; while the American Federation of Sex Hygiene, carrying out its plan of sex instruction, has been considered worthy of distribution by the United States Government.

Last Monday morning, Mrs. Anna Toniato, living in Branchville, gathered a quantity of toadstools, thinking they were mushrooms. She cooked and ate of them heartily. A short time afterward she was taken ill. The doctor worked diligently until Wednesday night to save her life, but the deadly poison had gotten its work in and she passed away. She was forty-five years of age.

FACING A SERIOUS PROPOSITION

The man or woman who has kidney trouble is facing a serious proposition, where grave complications result if not low neglect. Foley Kidney Pills are an honest curative medicine that once taken into your system mean restored kidney and bladder action, and return of health and strength.—Adv.
